Dixie damelio song with noah beck

Instagram(2) Some fans aren't happy with Dixie D'Amelio, Noah Beck and Ryland Storms for their recent TikTok video. Yes, the three influences collaborated on a since-deleted clip that featured a song called What That Mouth Do?, which was considered disrespectful by some fans. Some of the claims against the song said it was offensive to various religious groups. Petition to disable this sound, one comment read under their video. Another said: This is disrespectful in many ways! You call yourself influencers? Although the video has since been removed from TikTok, Ryland's account, it was filmed by fans and posted to the TikTok Room's Instagram account, where people continue to leave comments about choosing a song. This is just disrespectful,' someone else added. Both Dixie and Noah have since apologized. In another TikTok, recorded by Hype House co-founder Thomas Petrou, he used the same song and received similar comments from fans. Some who asked him to delete the video, which is still posted on his account. As fans know, this backlash came just as Noah announced that he and fellow Sway House members Josh Richards and Griffin Johnson had not only joined the rival TikTok Triller app, but that they also planned to work alongside the app on his executive team. The 19-year-old signs on as an adviser and stock shareholder, joining a number of other celebrities - such as Snoop Dogg and Lil Wayne - who have also invested in the app. For those who don't know, Triller, like TikTok, is a video sharing app that allows users to create music videos. Basically, music fans can choose a song, record some video clips and create an entire celebrity-quality music video. When he talked about partnerships, Noah told People: I'm here to make community creators a more cohesive environment. With the initiatives we are building in Triller, we will most likely achieve our goal. Love J-14? Don't forget to subscribe to our YouTube channel for fun, exclusive videos with your favorite stars.
